We believe that hydrogen peroxide contributes to regulation of health and to the self-regulation of cells by influencing the immune, hormonal and central nervous systems, the psyche and the DNA. In our opinion self-regulation is linked to the constitutional, inherited function of the DNA nucleotides in the cell nucleus and in the mitochondria. The nucleotides interact in the formation of the protein synthesis, which carries the genetic information to all parts of the mind-body.

Hydrogen peroxide is of significant importance in normal physiological processes as well as a powerful oxidizer. It oxidizes dysfunctional and old granulocytes, immuno-complexes, kills /inhibits bacteria, parasites, yeast and viruses, oxidizes lipids from the arterial walls, increases intracellular oxygen tension, stimulates oxidative enzymes, dilates coronary vessels and regulates membrane transport.
